Black Rose Wars + Rebirth Compatibility Handbook

This handbook contains all the rules and information needed to use the material from Black Rose Wars and Black Rose Wars: Rebirth in the same game.

NOTE: REFERENCE RULEBOOK

In this handbook we will use as a reference the rulebook provided with Black Rose Wars: Rebirth.

All statements in this document, as well as any references to stages, points, and/or paragraphs are intended inherently to the latest version of the Black Rose Wars: Rebirth rulebook, unless otherwise noted.

Event Cards

Event Cards are fully compatible between the two games. To include cards from both games in a game, before performing the setup, create the three Event Card decks (First, Second, and Third Moon) by shuffling the Event Cards from Black Rose Wars with those from Black Rose Wars: Rebirth.

Quest Cards

Quest Cards are fully compatible between the two games. To include cards from both games in a game, before performing the setup, create the three Mission Card decks (First, Second, and Third Moon) by shuffling the Quest Cards from Black Rose Wars with those from Black Rose Wars: Rebirth.

NOTE: QUESTS FOR 4/5/6 PLAYERS

Some Quest cards included in Black Rose Wars feature the symbol and their use is limited to games with 4, 5 or 6 players.

Schools of Magic

Schools of Magic are fully compatible between the two games. To include Schools of Magic from both games to the game, at step 9 of chapter 1 - Setup (page 8), form the Library by including 6 Schools of Magic chosen randomly or by mutual agreement by the players from all those available, whether they come from Black Rose Wars or Black Rose Wars: Rebirth.

ANATOMY DIFFERENCE

Spell Cards in Black Rose Wars are anatomically different from those in Black Rose Wars: Rebirth in several ways. Since it is necessary to refer to the rulebook included in Black Rose Wars: Rebirth, these anatomical differences are highlighted here, along with how each should be considered in order to work with the newer rulebook.

LIGHT SIDE AND DARK SIDE

Spell Cards in Black Rose Wars do not have a distinction between Light Side and Dark Side like the ones in Black Rose Wars: Rebirth. They used to show one side called the Straight Side, recognizable by the arrow in the upper left corner of the card A, and one side called the Reverse Side. For any indication of the rules and materials, the straight side of Black Rose Wars Spell Cards is equivalent to the Light Side, while the reverse side is equivalent to the Dark Side.

TRAP SPELLS AND PROTECTION SPELLS

Trap and Protection type Spell Cards of Black Rose Wars do not feature a box showing the Trigger Condition of the Effect B, instead this must be deduced from the first sentence of each of these Effects.
For all these cards, the Trigger Condition is considered to be all the text before the ":" of the Effect C.

School Spell Cards and Personal Spell Cards

School Spell Cards featured in Black Rose Wars are recognizable by the background color of the graphic layout only A.
School Spell Cards included in Black Rose Wars: Rebirth can be recognized by the School logo in the upper right corner of each Effect, in addition to the background color of the graphic layout B.
Personal Spell Cards in both games are to be considered as not being part of any School, although those in Black Rose Wars show the same background colors as the graphic layouts of some Schools of Magic.

Evocations

Evocation Cards (and Evocations) are fully compatible between the two games. To include Evocations from both games in a game, create a Evocation Card deck by shuffling the Evocation Cards from Black Rose Wars with those from Black Rose Wars: Rebirth.
Add the Evocation Models from both games to the game pool.

Rose Pins and Evocation Bases

Black Rose Wars Models have up to three slots on their bases, into which the owner inserts one or more of their Rose Pins in order to determine their ownership and placement of the Evocation Card in the Evocation Slots of their Mage's Sheet.
In Black Rose Wars: Rebirth, the Rose Pins have been replaced by Evocation Bases featuring one to three ◆ symbols. As with the number of Rose Pins placed in the base of an Evocation, the number of ◆ determines the placement of the Evocation Card in the Evocation Slots of one's Mage Sheet.
The following chart highlights the equivalence between ◆ and Rose Pins:

A Mage cannot own two different Evocation Models that have the same number of pinned Rose Pins and ◆ on the clipped Evocation Base.

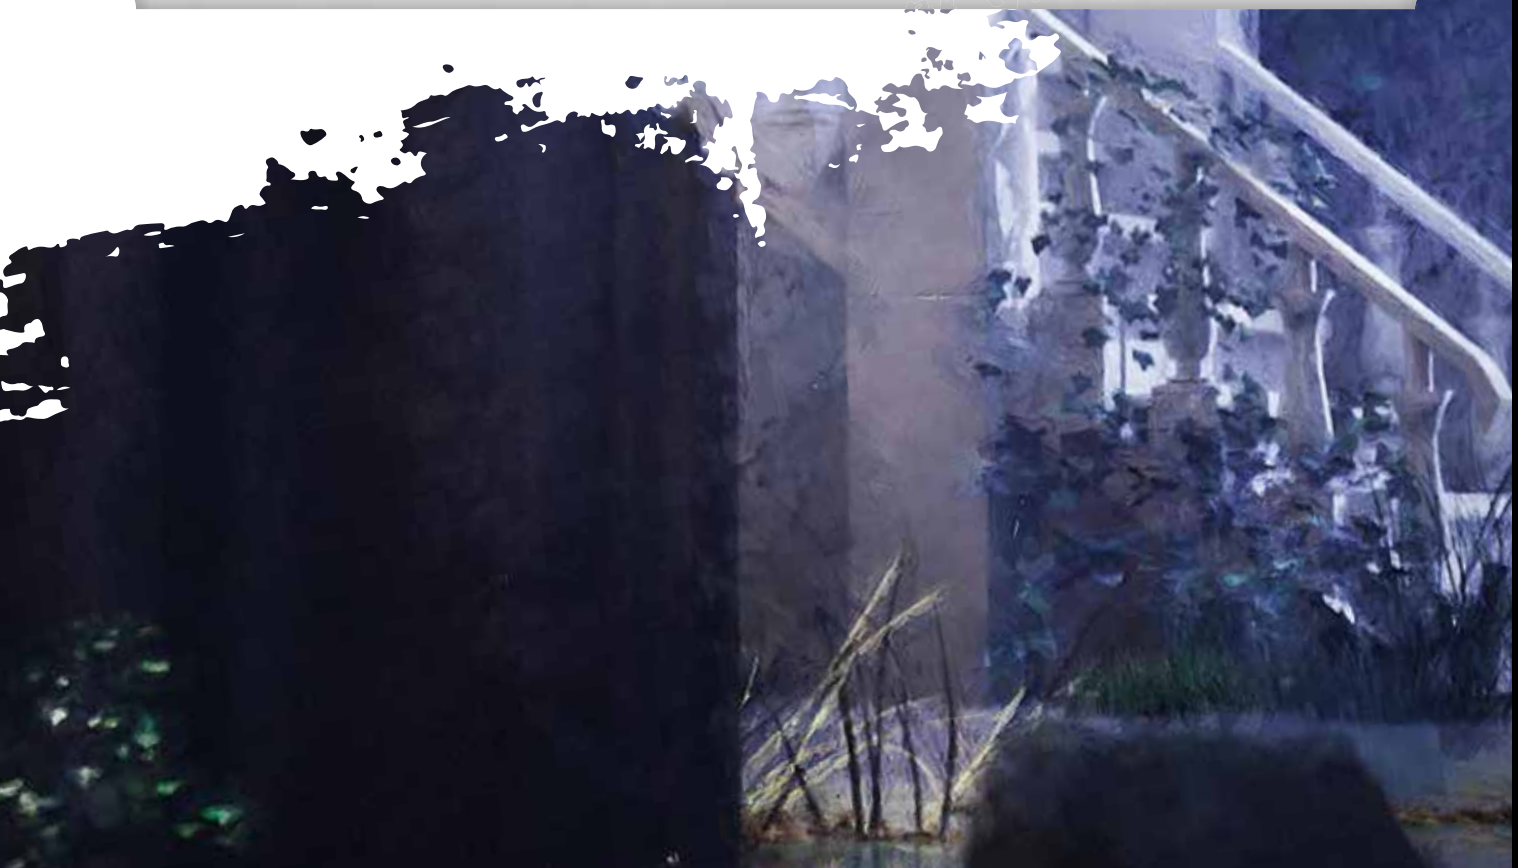
Large Models

In Black Rose Wars: Rebirth each Mage has at their disposal a Large Evocation Base that features no ⧫ symbol.
As stated on chapter 2 – Game Turn in the rulebook, Summon Evocations paragraph (page 20), a Mage may only own one Model clipped to the Large Evocation Base. This rule applies only to Models featured in Black Rose Wars: Rebirth and Models featured in later releases; put more simply, it means all Evocation Models that do not have slots in their bases.
Evocation Models that have slots in their bases follow the normal rules explained in the previous paragraph, without some limitations based on the size of their base. Some Black Rose Wars Evocations can house a single Rose Pin; this indicates that a Mage can own a single copy of such Evocations. Even if a single Rose Pin is placed on the base of the Model, the Evocation Card of these Models can be placed in any of the Evocation Slots (⧫, ⧫⧫, ⧫⧫⧫) of the Mage Sheet, chosen at the time the Model is summoned.

REMOVE EVOCATIONS

Some game Effects allow you to remove an Evocation from the Lodge. When a Mage resolves one of these Effects they must comply with these points:

- A non-Forgotten Spell cannot remove another Mages's Forgotten Evocation.
- A non-Forgotten Spell cannot remove another Mage's Evocation with a Health value greater than 3. Note that some Effects may change the Health value of an Evocation from that printed on the Evocation Card.
- An Effect that removes your own Evocation allows the Mage to ignore the previous points; therefore you can remove your Evocation with any Health value even if it is a Forgotten Evocation.
- A Forgotten Spell that removes an Evocation ignores the previous points; therefore you can remove one of your own (or another Mages's) Evocation with any Health value even if it is a Forgotten Evocation.



Rooms

To use the Rooms in Black Rose Wars and Black Rose Wars: Rebirth, before performing the game setup, choose randomly or by mutual agreement 19 Rooms with which to form the Lodge, making sure that each of the Rooms listed below is chosen in single copy, regardless of the game they come from.

The Rooms from Black Rose Wars start the game with their Front facing up and the corresponding Activation Token on them.
Rooms from Black Rose Wars: Rebirth start the game with the Destroyed side facing up.
Each Room used in the game will then follow the rules given in the rulebook of its respective game.

Sator Box Rooms

To include Rooms from the Sator Box in a game, perform game setup until you have a defined Lodge layout. Then select the Rooms from the Sator Box that you want to include. For each Room from the Sator Box selected, randomly choose a Room from the Lodge that has the same color and swap them, removing the Room just taken out of the Lodge from the game. If, during the game, a player draws a Quest Card that requires to be resolved in a Room that is not in the Lodge, they may publicly display the Quest Card, discard it, and draw another one.

FINAL SCORE

In the event that Rooms from both Black Rose Wars and Black Rose Wars: Rebirth are used in the same game, when calculating the End of the Game points on page 32, assign the Mages who have one or more Activation Tokens from a Room from Black Rose Wars the ֍ Power Points associated with each of those Tokens.
